Dear Sir—I wish to give you this testimony, that you may know, and let others know, what Vegetine has done for me. About two years ago a small sore came on my leg; it soon became a large ulcor, so troublesome that I consulted the doctor, but I got no relief, growing worse from day to day. I suffered terribly; I could not rest day or night; I was so reduced my friends thought I would never recover; I consulted a doctor at Columbus. I followed his advice; it did no good. I can truly say I was discouraged. At this time I was looking over discouraged. At this time I was looking over my newspaper; I saw your advertisement of Vegetine, the 'Great Blood Purifier' for cleansing the blood from all impurities, curing Humors, Ulcers &c. I said to my family, I will try some of the Vegetine. Before I had used the first bottle I began to feel better. I made up my mind I had got the right medicine at last. I could now sleep well at nights. I continued taking the Vegetine. I took thirteen bottles. My health is good. The ulcer is gone, and I am able to attend to business. I paid about four hundred dollars for medicine and doctors before I bought the Vegetine. I have recommendfore I bought the Vegetine. I have recommended Vegetine to others with good success. "Who Hauged Emmet?"

This has been a mystery for Irish historical students for three quarters of a century. The hangman was quite unknown to all the spectators of the death scene of the young patriot .-Mr. Anthoni is oncol the piencers of Dela-ware, Ohio. He settled here in 1824. He is a wealthy gentleman, of the firm of F. Anthoni major of Dublin, that all the skill of Emmet's sympathizers failed to penetrate his secret .--Since that time no one has claimed the infamous distinction, and when, thirty years ago, Dr. R. R. Madden was engaged on the "History of the United Irishmen" all his efforts were unable to lift the veil. It had been dis missed as one of the inscrutable problems of history, like the identity of the Man in the Iron Mask, and it is safe to say that even curious inquirers had forgotten that there was a mystery about the hangman of Emmet. But the mystery that had so long lain hidden has been suddenly cleared up.

Last Monday, August 5, an extremely old man died in the Workhouse at Ballina, Mayo as a professional innerant ballad singer. He believed himself at the time of his death to be about 99 years of age. On his deathbed he made a singular revelation to the doctor, master and chaplain of the workhouse. He told them that he was one of the band of soldiers who, on VEGETINE. -The great success of the the night of May 18, 1798, accompanied Majors Sirr and Swann to the house of Mr. Nicholas Murphy, the feather merchant, No. 153 Thomas street, where Lord Edward Fitzgerald was concealed, and effected the capture of the rebel chieftain. Barney Moran avowed that in that terrible business he faithfully discharged his duty as a loyal soldier to the British Crown. But his most startling revelation was to come. This was that he also was the executioner of Robert Emmet. This confession has been cor roborated since Moran's death by a most respect able gentleman of Ballina, who states that for many years he was aware of the unpleasant se eret, but was pledged not to divulge it till Moran was beyond the reach of the obloquy sure to fall upon him. Moran's statement was to the effect that he was on duty at Portobello barracks on the evening of September 19, 1803, when an emissary from Major Sirr came and offered him a considerable sum if next morning he would officiate as hangman for Emmet. Barney Moran was quite willing on this oceasion also to prove his "loya!ty" by work strangey out of keeping with a soldier's true vocation. But the history of that awful time attests that British soldiers in too many cases lost all sense of honor and took a fiendish delight in the performance of any bloody deed, the victim of which would be an Irish rebel or suspected

And so on the morning of September 20

1803, Barney Moran (having been conveyed thither in civilian's clothes) stood on the platform in Thomas street, directly opposite St. Catherine's church, with Emmet beside him, pinioned and standing beneath the gallows .--The story runs that Emmet expected a rescue and gazed about him long and wistfully as if trying to read hope in the upturned faces of the crowd. He protracted his arrangements as long as possible. Even with the haltar around his neck, in answer to the executioner's question whether he was ready, he several times exclaimed, "Not yet, not yet." At length the executioner, weary of waiting, turned him off, with the words "not yet" coming from his lips. Moran admits that he was the man who did this deed, and after the hanging severed the head from the body and held it up to the gaze of the spectators with the stereotyped for mula, "This is the head of a traitor." After the execution Moran was conveyed by some of Major Stirr's underlings to the castle, and then sent back to his military duty. He kept the secret, for well he knew the tempest of hatred and abhorrence which would gather around his head were it once known what he had done .-His ill got gains did not prosper. He quitted the army, and after a wandering life of hard ship and privation for half a century, exactly seventy five years after Emmet's death, his executioner has found a pauper's death and a was married at Berlin on Saturday. The Princess Marie of Prussia, daughter of the Emperet's nephew, Prince Frederick Charles having espoused Prince Henry of Holland, brother of the King of the Netherlands. The marriage ceremony took place in the New Palace, near Postdam, eracted by Frederick the Great in 1765. The company assembled was most distinguished, and as all the guests were in full costume, unitorms with orders or decorations and trained court robes, the spactacle presented was a brilliant one. The bride wore a rather plain dress of heavy white silk, embroidered in silver with rosebuds and myrtles; over it a court mantle of cloth of silver similarly ornamented, with a train aix ells in length. The veil was square, of point 'Alencon, embroidered with some myrtle and rosebud pattern; a golden hoop and the marriage coronet held it in place. The diadem, the gitt of the Emperor and Empress, was an exquisite iece of goldsmith's work; it contained twentyfour large gems, and was accompanied by necklace to match. The bride's handkerchief and fan were of point de gaze; the fan bore em broidered in the centre the Prussian eagle, and on either side the initial "M." The gloves, richly worked, were a gift from the people of Luxemburg, the Princess' luture residence .-Prince Hency appeared in naval uniform. The bridal tour, which will not be undertaken until the second week of September, will be to Parts. The brids! trousseau, which has been on exhibition at the palace in Berlin, is a magnificent one; every article in it is of German manufacture. The State gives 93,000 marks-one mark, 23 8 cents-towards the trousseau, and as Prince Frederick Charles is rich, and the bride's friends have been lavish of gifts, it makes a fine display.
